

Just Stuff

by Jan

Wave Thurs 4-26-84

There are a lot of things in this old world where the cure is almost as bad as the condition.

No one likes a sore throat — they're literally a pain in the neck (so to speak). A quick poke in the petuit with penicillin will usually cure what ails you; but for me, the sore throat has to get pretty sore before I'll put my posterior up for poking.

Cavities and toothaches are the same way. Cavities can be irritating, and toothaches quite painful, but for me to break down and visit the friendly neighborhood dentist, the toothache has to be next to unbearable, and the cavity is usually a cavern.

This "condition vs. cure" syndrome holds true in many areas. I was a long time nail biter and was forever complaining about how awful my chewed claws looked. The cure — simply grow out my nails. For an avid nail gnawer like me, that wasn't as easy as it sounds, but I did it. Now I'm finding that long nails (well, long by my standards) are as bad as short nails. They need to be filed and polished, painted and pampered. They get dirt underneath them, and they break, and I have to be careful not to rip the skin when I scratch an itch.

Getting a cold when you're playing out in the snow works on the same principal. To cure it, just go inside and get warm. That means you have to stop skiing, or snowmobiling, or whatever it is you're doing, so the condition has to be pretty bad to be worth the cure.

I'm not real big on clutter and mess, but by the same token, cleaning doesn't really thrill me either. Unfortunately, the cure for clutter is cleaning and it's a continual contest as to which will conquer.

No one likes to go hungry, but the cure is cooking. Tummy aches are no fun, but Alka Seltzer and Pepto Bismol are just about as bad. I'll suffer awhile with a bad belly before "stomaching" the cure.

Everyone is constantly complaining about the bad road conditions, especially this time of the year. But the cure is road construction. Which is worse? The profuse prevalent placement or prominent potholes, or being delayed for ages because of road construction? The cure almost outdoes the condition.

Blurry vision and having to wear glasses; crooked teeth and having to wear braces; wanting to be skinny and having to diet; putting up with someone's company or telling them to bite the wall (not an easy thing to do); having a messy yard or doing the yard work; and the list goes on. Condition vs. cure — it's a toss up!

the Classic Style in Heber.

The groom has filled an LDS mission to Houston, Texas, and has been attending BYU.

The couple will make their home in Orem, Utah.

different musical periods. The Medieval, Renaissance, Baroque Classical, Romantic and 20th Century — playing a piano selection to illustrate each histor-

Anderson, President; Iva Dawn Remund, Vice President; Ida Thomas, Sec. & Treasurer.

Delicious refreshments were served.

Elder Jeff Lawson

Lawson to Report

Elder Jeff Lawson has just returned from the New Zealand Auckland Mission where he has served for the past 18 months. Jeff is the son of Phil and Carol Lawson.

His welcome home will be on April 29 in the Heber 1st-6th-9th Ward at 10:15 a.m.

Elder Michael Mahoney

Mahoney Returns

Michael Mahoney, son of Clarence and Lois Mahoney has just returned from the Paraguay, Asuncion Mission.

His welcome home will be at 2:45 p.m. in the Midway 4th Ward at the Midway Stake Center.

Friends of the family are invited to attend.

What Kind Of Person Should Be Our Next Governor?